The key...great customer service. We love the marine industry and one of our core missions is to help raise the customer service bar in this industry.

However, the internet has completely transformed the way we do business. While traditional sales principles still very much apply (such as building a solid relationship with the customer, earning their trust, adding value, customer qualification, etc), how you get there is now very different. That sounds like a great condition for a boat! Storing the boat inside and using it only in fresh water can help prevent damage from environmental factors such as sunlight, saltwater corrosion, or algae growth. It's good to know that the boat has been well-maintained in that regard.

As for the engine, having only 80 hours since the rebuild indicates that it has been relatively lightly used since the overhaul. A rebuilt engine typically means that it has been restored or repaired to a like-new condition, so it should be in good working order. However, it's always a good idea to inquire about the details of the engine rebuild, such as who performed the work and what parts were replaced or refurbished.

In summary, your boat's excellent condition and low engine hours suggest that it has been taken care of and could provide you with many more hours of enjoyable boating.
